Just what Florida needs: more golf courses.

Well, maybe what Florida needs are the right kinds of golf courses. That's the idea behind Streamsong Resort.

This is yet another golf outing that's truly an outing. The closest big city is Tampa, 60 miles away.

But that's where the unique landscape lies. Once a phosphate mining site, it features, according to the entry, "towering sand dunes, dramatic contours, lakes and native vegetation left the from the mining process — making the development a natural fit with its surroundings."

Then there are the architects: Coore & Crenshaw and Tom Doak, renowned for creating spectacular venues. Each designed a course for the venture.

Apparently, the formula is a success. Golf Magazine ranked both courses in its Top 100 Courses in the U.S. list in 2013.

WHAT THE JUDGES SAID:

"The team delivered a unique golfing experience within an unusual landscape and setting. A beautifully sculpted golf course."

— Rick Baril

"Amazing opportunity for a reclaimed site."

— Mike Nuzzo

"Raw and rugged beauty."

— Sam Sakocius

Streamsong Red was at 52; Streamsong Blue finished 62nd.

TWO ACCLAIMED GOLF VENUES WERE JUST THE BEGINNING.
